BIRTH. At Ligoniel, the Peak, on the 26th November, the wife of F. H. MAY, of a daughter.

HONGKONG OFFICE: 14, DES VŒUX ROAD C LONDON OFFICE: 131, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Hongkong, November 28th, 1900 The course of events in China from day to day shows more clearly that the policy of which Great Britain has been the exponent in China has utterly, failed in its object of bringing about any satisfactory settlement of the present insupportable position. fact, so far from progressing the situation seems to be daily becoming more insoluble. and the knot which with a little knowledge of the complications could have been unravelled, now needs the sword of ALEXANDER to undo it. At the beginning. as we have pointed out, there were in China itself the elements of recuperation; the Viceroys almost without exception the side of order, and only waited to be assured of personal protection to throw in their lots with the better disposed Powers. Amongst the Powers themselves there was still a certain amount of common feeling, and a desire to bring about a settlement in the general interest of all. Now is practically past, the want of any support to the Viceroys, and the desire. while taking advantage of their acts, to leave them to the tender mercies of the Dowager and her crew on the restoration of two there are unmistakeable signs that slowly, but surely, the good wishes. the provincial officials are vanishing, and that where, had we been influenced by an intelligible policy, we could have confidently looked for support, we now to face a sullen power of opposition. been putting out their feelers, and, finding that we have calmly submitted to the insults intended in each successive "Imperial Edict," have been advancing their claims. as if we, not they, were the fugitives from justice. Unfortunately this foolish complacence on our part has not ended with patch up a peace at any price has convinced large audience will no floubt be present.

the Viceroys that it is our deliberate intention, when the time comes, to hand them over tied and hound to the tender mercies of the party who deliberately planned the murder of all who were either foreigners themselves, or had any sympathy with the party of reform in China. Acting with this party is Lt Hung-chang, who, it is very well known, bears no good will to either of the Yangtze Viceroys. The fate of CHANG YIN-HWANG, the first victim to the reaction, following within a few days of the disgrace of Lt, is an object lesson that neither Liu Kung-ri nor Chang Chin-tung can afford to disregard; and as we have exhibited no sign of shielding the Viceroys from the vengeance of the reactionaries, we have practically compelled them, however, personally unwilling, to assume a compliance with the ruling policy which at the beginning they were far from feeling. Leaving on one side the mistakes in policy which have brought about this situation, it is equally clear that, from a practical point of view, and looking merely to the military exigencies of the case, we have committed an equally grave mistake. We had, in fact, in our own hands from a military standpoint the means of rendering any defence impossible. We had not very long ago the power to cut off completely all the resources of the the fugitive Court; we were in undisputed possesand were in a position to cut off all supplies of men and funds, not to mention foodsupplies, which we now know to be going to Heianfu in large quantities; yet in the face of these facts we have made no attempt to utilise the commanding position which this give us. It was not to be expected thatseeing the embarrassing nature of the negotiations in which we permitted ourselves to be entangled, the Viceroys were themselves going to point out, to their own possible ruin, a course which was evident to any thinking man; and we unfortunately listened to the interested suggestions of such polluted sources as the Chinese Legations in London and Washington. If it be true that the Chinese Bannerman who represented China at Paris, and the Emperor himself, in his touching appeal to the foreign

Powers, have both disclaimed their coincidence in this policy, it throws a lurid light on the whole course of our negotiations. No one with sufficient knowledge of the character of the men into whose hands the conduct of affairs has fallen can plead ignorance of their reactionary intentions. No real reply has been given to the charges of Dr.

Morrison against the heads of the Legations in England and the United States; and yet in the face of these grave charges we permit the very men arraigned to be our guides and advisers.

The troopship Indiana ran ashore on hard and fast ground on the 7th inst. on the Island of Polillo, off the East coast of Luzon. No loss of life is reported, and the damage to the ship is unknown. There was on board one company of the let Infantry, who, with the crew, are all saved, and assistance has been sent down from Manila to float her.

It will be remembered that some little time ago a number of the Portuguese at Shanghai expressed their desire to form a company of volunteers to be attached to the local corps. * The British telegraph steamer Sherard Osborne, the Danish boat Nordiske, and the German vessel Podbielski, are employed in laying the cable between Klaochow and Shanghai. The latter vessel will take the cable from Kinochow to Shaweishan, the Osborne will then splice it and convey it in lighters to Block House island, where the Nordiske will fasten on and run out the cable to Woosung. Here it will come on to Shanghai overhead along the existing lines and will take off at the German Post Office in Kiukiang Road. The Glenfurg has brought out part of the cable. Later ion, another cable will connect Kisochow and

In consequence of pre-emptory orders received from the German Government, the Commission which for the past few months has been shipping Californian horses and supplies at San Francisco for the German troops in China Itas left the state for Europe. This step has been taken, a San Francisco paper says, as an indica. tion that Germany's policy in the Orient has been altered in the direction of peace. Of the large number of horses purchased by the Commission only part have been shipped, and 1,160 were ready for shipment when the closing instructions were received. The transports Frankfort and Verena have consequently been sent across the Pacific | nicle. It is believed, the Chronicle says, in of the islands there will be an enormously insome quarters that this change in the operations of the German Government has behind it a material modification of its belligerent estlitude toward the Chinese. Since the political horizon in the Orient has been partly cleared, the extensive operations which the Gorman Government had in contemplation appear to be unnecessary.

Mr. Chantrey Inchbald, formerly of Hong kong and now representative in London of the Russo-Chinese Bank, writes to the following effect in the Times of the 26th ult. - Your Issue of the 13th inst. contains a telegram through Rauter's Agency via Berlin to the following effect :- " The Chinese Customs Bank, which is entrusted with the fereign loan service, is stated to have remitted the sum of 300,000 faels to the Imperial Court at Singan-fu. It is added that the bank intends sending further remittances." The news excited no small comment at the time in view of its importance to all holders of China bonds; for, put bluntly: the telegram meant no less than that the money which was earm reked for the payment of the coupons of China's foreign debt was being "commandeered 's by the Chinese Government for its own use, whilst the employment of it might not unreasonably be expected to prolong China's present hostile attitude towards the foreign Powers. As a matter of fact, however, the above contemplated action of the Chinese authorities has been successfully frustrated -with the one exception of the first shipment officials of the Health, Department, were not of 300,000 tack-by the prompt and energetic put, but at the meeting of the Council on 14th protest of this bank's manager in Shanghai, September Mr. Perera made a personal explanaand the effort to direct the Imperial Maritime | tion to the effect that the authority, to which you Customs revenue into the coffers of the Central appeared to take exception, had been delegated Government (an act which, if allowed, might to him by your predocessor in the chair, and have gone on indefinitely) has thus been stop- had been exercised at his wish. SWATOW.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

Swatow, 24th November. MISQUIEVOUS FRENCH ACTION.

The French gunboat Concite arrived here from Canton on the 13th instant and after two days' stay left for Tchia Na, a great trading place to the north of Swatow. The Comite returned from there on the 23rd inst. and the particulars of her doings up along the coast which have reached me may interest the readers of your paper, who will see for themselves how the French are taking things in their own. hands, without awaiting the approaching conclusion of peace. Since the last disturbances here one of the local French priests was appointed to represent France as Consul at Chowchowfu, the seat of the Taotai's Yamen. The new Consul accompanied the Comete on her oraise along the coast, and on arrival at Tchia Na a force of marines was landed, who in company with the Commander and the Consul went to interview the local Chington and enquired from him why he did not prevent the demolishing of three houses which had taken place a long time ago. The Chingtei, being in his present office only a short while, pleaded ignorance as to the demolition of the houses. The Commander would on no account listen to the explanations but intimated to him that he would have to pay 88,000 to make good the loss sustained. I may mention that the houses, the property of converts, were destroyed by rowdies. while the payment of $8,000 is to come from the villagers.

In the meantime the French appropriated. cattle, fowls and vegetables from the inhabitants. or, as the Boers say, commandeered all these things for their own use on board the Comete. Undoubtedly a cheap way of provisioning a man-of-wur!

ANOTHER INSTANCE. In a village called Long Tchin Te, close to Ungkong three Roman Catholic convert families were robbed by the rowdies, and in consequence the villagers had to pay $800 compensation to the French. Not satisfied with this the French ordered the villagers to burn three houses, to which the Chinese, yielding to force majeura, agreed, but so far they have not Put their promise into school execution. You can see, nevertheless, in what way the French are moting out justice (?).

SCARING AN OFFICIAL. From the above-mentioned village the Comete proceeded to Ungkong where, they were received by the Niew Ping Sheng, specially sent down by the Taotal for that purpose. The French sgain demanded $8,00 for the dumages caused by rowdies in the late distirbances, and threatened to burn down a certain number of houses which were pointed out to them by the native converts and subsequently marked by the French, if the villagers refused to satisfy their demands. IN ORIGINAL JURISDICTION.

CHIU WAH V. CHUE RAN.

In this case (the hearing of which was resumed from Monday) the plaintiff is a trader residing at 54, Staunton Street, and the defendant a clerk in the employ of Messrs. Deacon and Mastines, solicitors. It is a claim for the specific performance of an agreement, the defondant counterclaiming for $6,000 deposited by him with the plaintiff. Mr. J. J. Francis, Q.C. (instructed by Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist) appeared for the plantiff, and Mr. E. H. Sharp (instructed by Messrs. Deacon and Hastings) for the defendant. The special jurors were Messrs, R. G. Shewan (foreman), A. Haupt, P. Jordan, S. Hancock, J. S. Van Buren, G. Stewart, and J. M. Beattie. The evidence being concluded, counsel delivered their final addresses Mr. Francis said that the plaintiff was suing in this case for the specific performance of contract which was entered into by the defendant with the plaintiff for the purchase of some property in Gilman's Bazaar for the sum of The particular character of the suit in which they were concerned was not an ordinary common law suit. They were not asking for damages for breach of contract but that an order might be made insisting upon the contract being still in force and compelling the defendant to specifically perform, not by paying damages, but by taking over and paying for the property.

The Chief Justice-You must remember there is an alternative claim for damages. Mr. Francis-Ch, yes, there is. He added that this claim for damages was only in the alternative in an equitable sense of the word It was not put in as a common law claim for damages., The defendant said he refused complete the contract on equitable grounds. He said he entered into the contract under a mistaken impression, and he said that this was not a mistake solely and entirely owing to his own fault and carelessness, but a mistake which originated in the misdescription of the property which they in the first instance furnished to him. If that turned out to be so -that they misdescribed the property to any serious extent, and if as a matter of fact the defendant did enter into the contract under a greatly mistaken impression as to what he was buying, a mistake originating in a misdescription furnished to him by them—it was perfectly clear that they would not be entitled to a decree of specific performance. So far as the first meniorandum was concerned it would appear to have originated in a mistaken notion existing in the plaintiff's own mind for want of sufficient information, because he had not then seen the plan. He appeared to have get the statement as to the area from Mr. Fung Wa Chuen, from whom he purchased the property. He saw no plan himself before he entered into an agreement to purchase, and he conveyed the mistaken idea which had entered into his own mind into the mind of the defendant. With reference to the second memorandum, he was perfectly willing to admit in the doubtful state of the evidence that it was given to the defendant at the time and place men-But as his friend put tioned by him. it, the second memorandum was a very little matter in the case, being merely an extension of the first. Before a mistake of this character could give rise to any equitable relief it must be clear that that mistake constituted the basis or foundation upon which the defendant entered into the contract. Therefore the two questions of fact which it seemed to him the jury had to answer were-first, it being made by the plaintiff to the defendant as to the passengers and crew, to the value of admitted that there was a misrepresentation measurements of the property, was that mistake $10,128. afterwards corrected by the exhibition of a plan of the property to the defendant? The second question was, did the defendant in fact, quite apart from the question of plan, enter into this contract in reliance upon that memorandum, or was that memorandum a mere incident in the transaction on which he was not relying at all? The defendant's case was that he was relying absolutely from the beginning to the end of this transaction on the statements contained in the memorandum. Mr. Francis asked from the defendant's education and from the nature of his employment was there any reason in the world why he should not have made these calculations himself. He contended, however, that supposing the plan had over been exhibited, from the very nature of the transaction the defendant did not and could not have relied upon that memorandum. Mr. Francis proceeded to deal with the raised therein.

Mr. Sharp, touching on Mr. Francis's admission as to the second memorandum, said he could not pass the point over as his friend seemed disposed to do, because he thought the jury would agree that it was very vital indeed. It was very vital indeed as concerned the trust worthiness and credibility of the plaintiff. It was admitted in cross-examination by Mr. Fung Wah Chuen that some time before the signature was put to this agreement he had lent the plan of the property to the plaintiff. He submitted that it was perfectly clear from the evidence that these figures were taken from Fung Wah Chuen's plan in all human probability, as the defendant said, some time before the 22nd September, when Fung Wah Chuen lent his plan to the plaintiff. His friend said they could not explain how the error arose in the first memorandum. He (Mr. Sharp) could, however, explain the matter. He submitted that the only explanation was that when Fung Wah Chuen first lent that plan for the purposes in connection with the re-sale of the property to the defendant the plaintiff in good faith, having an imperfect knowledge of English figures, copied the figures intended to represent the area of the lots, understanding them to mean the length of the The figures were written in such a situation across the lots that they might be taken to represent the lengths. He contended that it was no answer to say that the purchaser had the means of discovering the error. The vendor was under no obligation to give the figures. The vendor, however, had given thom and was consequently bound by them. With regard to the alleged inspection of the property by the defendant he contended that inspection would not necessarily saddle the person inspecting with any knowledge as to misdescription. He took it that an ordinary. man not being an expert would be very far in error in computing the size of that court or the size of the site upon which the buildings Mr. Sharp contested Mr. Francis's contention that this was not professedly a sale of so much per foot and that, therefore, the measurements given were not of much moment, argued that this was not a case in which damages could be secured by the plaintiff, and as regarded the deposit of $6,000 he pointed out that it was expressly stipulated that if by any fault of the seller the contract was not completed the deposit should be returned. The further hearing was adjourned.

It is true that her father was carried off by Moorish pirates before the tale opens, but his rescue is accomplished by no more exciting means than the payment of a sum of money. One character, Gertride, Catherine's consin has the wickedness and misfortune to speak ill of her grandmother while the latter is behind an oaken screen, and is consequently left out of the will. Nothing more disturbing than this mars the general harmony of the story. Trinity bells continue to ring during its course, involning the sprinkling of a few bars of music over the pages. THE TIBETAN MISSION TO RUSSIA.

From some time past students of Central Asian matters have been attributing to Russia the intention to carry her frontier to the Himas layas by the occupation of Kashgaria, and also to establish her influence over the Buddhist Holy Land of Tibet, only to be designated alarmists and propagators of absurd views by Mr. Stead and other friends of every country but their own. And now we learn, writes correspondent to the Times, to the surprise of even the best-informed, that the matter is no longer in the stage of intention, but that Russia has successfully broken ground in the High Asia. Something of the same sensation, on a smaller was created when Grombtchevsky. now commanding on the Sungari, made his way into Hunza 12 years ago. The arrival of a Tibetan mission in Europe wished to hide so notable a success, but we owe Badmayeff's mission lie in its results. It is not have received him and accepted his presents, Lamas, but it certainly is very remarkable that he should have been able to induce so supreme and secluded a potentate as the Dalai Lama to send a return mission to Europe. We have Badmayoff when the Dalai's envoy had "the happiness" a few days ago of being presented to the Emperor at Livadia. It must have surpassed that of the recipient of the gold medal of our own Geographical Society, which is considered the blue ribbon of explorers, but with the experience of Grombtchevsky in our memory we may hint that it may prove more names are given as Axharamba Agvan Dorjieff. If the description is accurate, we may assume that this particular Khomba or high priestperhaps head of a monastery is a better rendering-is one of the council of the Dalai Lama. The use of the word "senior" may be intended to convey the idea that this Khomba is the Gialbu, or Prime Minister, of Tibet, but we shall. not believe that until very conclusive evidence is furnished. The Dalai's council is composed of Prime Minister and nine councillors, five of them priests, or Dabas and four laymen. Axharamba Agvan is probably one of the Dabas on this council. The Gialbu is always chosen from one of the governing lamas of the four "lings" or divisions into which Tibet is divided. He is a saintly personage, and, like the Dalmi himself, his soul is supposed to transmigrate into another body. For this reason alone the Tibetan Prime Minister would never be allowed to leave his country, and consequently the official whom the Russians are entertaining is, at the highest, only a merc councillor who has no right to ride in a palanquin or "palki" in his own country. Until more details are youchsafed some scepticism is permissible as to the precise value of the credentials, if any, of this individual. There are sacerdotal adventurers in the land of the Lamas as elsewhere, and according to Continental interviewers the Paris not wish to go to Manila until the American recombles the oily matter nature provides for Exhibition itself contained at least one saintly equadron had first disposed of the Spanish neurishing and stimulating its growth, without Mongol Lama from Urga bearing the heavy which the hair becomes dry, thin, and brittle. burden of a soul in transitu. genuine councillor from Lhasa, there is a wide range for speculation as to the metives with which the Dalai Lama allowed him to depart. All we know of that personage is that he was born in the year 1875 and discovered shortly afterwards in the orthodox fashion on the death of his predecessor. What his views may be on any subject is beyond conjecture, and we do not even know whether the real power in his country lies in his hands or in those of the two Ambans who represent the now decaying majesty of China. The movement of events round his frontier, the abortive Macaulay mission, the troubles in Sikkim, the fighting in the passes, and the more than once threat. ened war with Nepal, added to the increasing efforts of explorers from the north and south to enter Tibot, have necessarily increased. the curiosity about Europeans, even among priests penned together in lamaseries. Nor need it be disputed that, as danger seemed to . threaten from the south, the Lhasa councilmight have been disposed to listen to promises that aid would come from the north. There is, however, no doubt that the question raised by the exchange of diplomatic civilities between Russia and Tibot is one that the Government of India cannot pretend to treat with the indifference which it has shown to M. Petrovskv's intrigues in Kashgaria. Tibet is a close neighbour of India, and we are not likely to forget that Warren Hastings sont two embassies to that country at a time when Russia was of very small account on the steppes. Even were we to show anothy in the matter, our very good ally the Maharaja of Nepal and his gallant Gurkha army would not look on with indifferonce while Russia or any strong militant power established itself on the northern side of the Kirong Pass. We need only atter one word of encouragement at Khatmandu, and there will be an end to Tibetan seclusion within a very few wooks, possibly without a single Indian regiment being sent beyond the frontier. Nepal has rights in Tibet to which we cannot pretend. She has a considerable trade, a recognized position in an assigned quarter for the residence of her merchants, and accredited officers to uphold their interests, and she has also claims for redress for many wrongs inflicted. It is not long since all the influence of the Indian Go. vernment was needed to prevent the Nepalese invading Tibet. There is no longer any necessity to exercise that restraining influence, which was only asserted to please the Chinese Government. That Government has forfeited all claims on our consideration, and it is also tolerably clear that its influence at Lhasa, at least for good purposes, has become a thing of the past. Are we to stand by while that of Russia is insidiously to be substituted for it? The offer of the Khatmandu Durbar in 1839 and again of Jung Bahadur in 1852 to occupy Tibet is as good to-day as when first made, and is far more easily to be achieved. The intolerance of the priestly caste in Tibet which has so long barred the doors of that country in our face could not be indefinitely tolerated. The success of Russia in establishing some sort of diplomatic relations with the Dalai Lamu reveals all its perilous possibilities at a flash. We are not going to . allow an Abyssinia to be created at the gates of Bengal, or the failure of Hunza to be obliterated in a triumph at Lhasa.

PUT TO THE TEST. "I remember very little of the events of that day," my love said, with some reluctance. knew Ashwicke, he having been a guest here last year, and a frequent visitor at Gloucester. Square. With Nora and Sir Henry I returned to London in early May, after wintering in Florence, and one morning at the end of June I met Major Tattersett unexpectedly in the Burlington. He told me that his sister and piece from Scotland were visiting him at his house in Queen's Gate Gardens, and invited to overflowing with the mystery of it all. Ye me to call, and make their acquaintance. "Had you never been to his house previously?

"Never. He, however, gave me an invitation to luncheon for the twenty-fourth of July, which I accepted. On arrival I found the major, his sister and his niece were out shopping: therefore I sat alone awaiting them in the drawing room, when of a sudden I experienced for the first time that curious sen- letters were placed. Then, when I sat up, I became aware of the bewildering truth-that I was lying upon one of the seats in Hyde Park." "In Hyde Park? And you had been placed there while in a state of unconsciousness?" "Yes. Upon my finger I found a weddingring. Was it possible, I wondered, that I was nctually married to some anknown man?"

"You saw nothing of Ashwicke?" "I saw no one except the maid-servant who showed me into the drawing-room, and cannot in the least account for the strange sentation which held me helpless in the hands of my enemies. I saw the man I married at the church, but so mistily that I did not recognise you when we met again.

"But you knew the house in Queen's Gate Gardons. Did you not afterwards return there and seek an explanation of Tattorsett?" "On discovering my whereabouts I rose and

"Why did he wish to see you?" "In order to prove to me that he had no hand in the tragic affair at Whitton. I had suspect ed all along that he was responsible for the colonel's death, and my opinion has not altered. I begged him to tell me, the reason of the plot against me, the motive of my marriage, and the identity of my husband. But he refused pointblank, telling me to ask La Gioin, who knew have ensued in the case of each of us. "To determine exactly what was the poison used was an almost insurmountable task, for I in the park at Whitton and the conversation I had never met with the substance before, but after working diligently all this time I found that by treating it with sulphuric acid it underwent no change, yet by adding a fragment of bicaromate of potash a series of blue, violet,

The same results were brought about also by peroxido of lead and black oxide of manganess. I dried the skin of a frog and tenched it with a drop of solution containing a single one of the tiny crystals, when strong tetanic convulsions ensued, and the animal died in ton seconds. At last, however, after many other experiments, the idea occurred to me that it was an alkaloid of some plant unknown in modern toxicology. I was, of course, aware of the action of the calaban bean of the West Coast of Africa, the akazga, the datura soods of India, and such like poisons, but this was cortainly none of these. It was a substance terribly deadly-the only substance that could strike death through the cuticle-utterly une known to us, yet the most potent of all secret

> "And how did you determine it at last?" "By a reference I discovered in an encient Latin treatise on posions from the old monastery at Pavia; now in the British Museum. It gave me a clue which ultimately led me to establish it as the alkaloid of the yayana bean. This bean it appears was used in the tenth and eleventh centuries by a sect of despotic Arab mystics called the Fatimites, who had made Cairo their capital, and held rule over Syria, as well as the northern coast of Africa. The last Fatimite was, at a later date, dethroned by Saladin, conqueror of the Koords, and who opposed Richard I. of England, Tho poison, introduced from Egypt into Italy, was known to the old alchemists as the most secret means of ridding one of undesirable acquaintances. Its effect, it was stated, was the most curious of any known drug, because for the time being it completely altered the disposition of the individual and caused him to give way to all sorts of curious notions and delusions, while at the same time he would be entirely obedient to the will of any second person. Afterwards came fierce delirium, a sensation as though the lower limbs were fazen, complete loss of power, exhaustion and death. But in modern toxicology even the name of the vayana

" My first step, therefore, was to seek assistance of the great botanist who is ourator of Kew Gardens, and ofter considerable difficulty and many experiments we both arrived at the conclusion that it was the bean of a small and very rarb plant peculiar to the oasis of the Ahir in the south of the Great Sahara. At Kew there was a streated specimen, but it had never horne fruit; therefore we both searched for any other specimen tint might exist in England. We heard of one in the wonderful gardens of La Mortola, near Mentone, and after diligent inquiries discovered that a firm of importers in Liverpool had sold a specimen with the beans in pod, which was delivered to a person named Turton. living in Bishop's Wood Road, Highgate, and planted in a small greenhouse there. I have not been idle," he added with a grin. Then taking from a drawer in the table before him a photograph, he handed it to me, saying, " I have DON'T COUGH-USE been able to obtain this photograph of Mrs. Turton-the lady who purchased the plant in question.

He held it out to me, and in an instant I. recognised the face. It was that of the woman who had cropt so silently through the foom at Atworth - La Gioia! Briefly. I told him all that had transpired on that night, and declared that I recognised her features, whereat he granted in satisfaction. "You asked me to try to solve the mystery and I have done so. You will find this woman living at a house called 'Fairmend,' in the road I have indicated. I have not only, established the cause of the phenomena, but I have at the same time rediscovered the most extraordinary. and deadly substance known in toxicology. As far as the present case is concerned my work is finished. I have succeeded in making some of |. the vayana alkaloid. Here it is!" and taking a small yellow glass tube, securely corked and I knew now why he was wearing gloves in his "And have you seen this woman?" I asked the queer old fellow whose careful investigations had been crowned with such success. "How Gioia who had come in the guise of a drosssealed, he handed it to me. In the bottom I saw about half-a-grain of tiny white crystals.

"I have seen her, and I have seen the plant. It is from one of the beans which I secured No. 6, Ich House Street, Praya Central secretly that I have been able to produce, that substance. I knew her name by overhearing a conversation between Miss Wynd and hor cousin on the following morning."

"And the woman is in ignorance that you know the truth?" "Entirely. I have finished. It is for you to | AGENCIES :act as you think fit."

I expressed admiration for his marvellous patience and ingenuity in solving the mystery, and when I left it was with the understanding that if I required his further assistance he would willingly render it. . (To be continued.)
